International Course on Agro-Crime, Agro-Terrorism, and Food Supply Chain Security Begins with 50 Attendees

The international Course, titled "Agro-Crime, Agro-Terrorism, and Food Supply Chain Security," commenced today October 2nd at the historic Angioino Aragonese Castle in Agropoli, Italy, drawing an impressive turnout of 50 participants from diverse backgrounds.

The event has attracted attendees including professionals, researchers, experts, technicians, students, and academics, all eager to expand their knowledge and contribute to food supply chain security. Organized by the European Centre for Disaster Medicine in collaboration with renowned partners, this six-day program aims to tackle the intricate challenges posed by agro-crime, agro-terrorism, and biological hazards within agriculture and the food sector. Participants can expect an in-depth exploration of global food supply chain safeguarding, along with strategies for risk mitigation and security enhancement.
